ABOUT ME

Born in 2000 in Istanbul, Turkey, I completed my bachelor studies in Political Science and International Relations at Turkish-German University in Istanbul, where I studied in a fully German-taught program. As a result of being educated at a joint project of Germany and Turkey, I gained in-depth academic exposure to German politics and history as well as Turkish politics. During my undergraduate studies, I worked part-time in Digital Marketing at Profiles International, a Germany-based human resources management and consulting firm, where I also gained valuable experience in the field of human resources. Building on my German-language training and my academic focus on German and European politics, I began my Master's degree in Political Science at the University of Bonn in October 2024. As of 2025, I am a scholarship holder of the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung. My academic interests focus on political parties, political systems and gender studies.
